

REQUEST FOR PROPOSALS: COPYRIGHT AND ADVOCACY TRAINING

Explanation KR21 Programme

The Knowledge Rights 21 Programme (KR21) is focused on bringing about changes in legislation and practice across Europe that will strengthen the right of all to knowledge. It is built on a conviction that knowledge is essential for education, innovation and cultural participation, and that everyone should have the possibility - in particular through libraries and archives, and digitally - to access and use it.

KR21 is looking for a contractor who can undertake a work package focused on developing and delivering a training course which will help librarians and like-minded groups advocate more effectively for copyright reform.

Description of the assignment

Develop and deliver a first-stage open training course for librarians in Europe (prepared and delivered through online classes), focusing on copyright and advocacy (drawing on links with library schools, high-quality IP law faculties and experienced advocates), and raising awareness of differences in law across Europe. Draw on participation in this in order to recruit 'leaders' in each country, forming a task force for driving the project forwards.

Deliver more focused training to groups of leaders in 5-7 countries (also through online classes) on both the specific thematic elements of the project, as well as the development of plans for advocating for change nationally in pursuit of the project's goals, based on assessments of national landscapes supported by the findings of work in different thematic areas of the Programme (taking account of existing copyright systems, governance, partners among students, researchers and other access to knowledge advocates and copyright experts).

This work should help build more active and sustainable capacity for advocacy around copyright law at the national level

In the context of the wider Programme, this Work Package contributes to the outcome, over three years, that there is, in at least 20 countries, an active and sustainable network of individuals from the library field and beyond with the confidence and knowledge to engage successfully in efforts to change copyright law. These networks play a central role in achieving the successes of the Programme as a whole, as well as complementing work in Brussels. An overview of the Programme is available in Annex 2.

Bids are welcome up to €70 000 (inclusive of VAT where appropriate), with value for money considered as part of the review process.

ANNEX 2: Overview of the Programme

Libraries have a unique role to play in any copyright discussion. As knowledge institutions bridging the worlds of heritage, education, research and culture, they depend on copyright exceptions to carry out missions to enable and stimulate the generation of and access to knowledge to society.

They have the unique selling point of being regarded as reasonable interlocutors, as well as networks that take them into every city, town and village.

This project aims to mobilise this potential, engaging with others working for copyright reform and access to knowledge, in order to build momentum towards copyright reform into the long term.

Through this, it aims to drive change in a range of areas where progress is both possible and necessary in the short term, in particular in the light of the COVID-19 pandemic. These areas are all well-suited to collaboration with other sectors, have the potential to bring benefits to a wide range of libraries and their users, set important precedents and allow for sustained engagement and outcomes:

- Facilitating access to e-books for users of public and academic libraries;
- Protecting users' rights from contract override and technological protection measures;
- Socialising open norms in Europe;
- Advocating for legislated secondary publishing rights; • Accelerating the uptake of rights retention.

By focusing on Europe, we not only tap into pre-existing networks of libraries, but also draw on the potential to run a coordinated, cross-border campaign, to create precedents that will be influential globally, and to shape the position of the EU at discussions at WIPO.

The project will allow work to happen that would not be possible otherwise, notably around the training and mobilisation of the library field, the formation of solid and sustainable networks of advocates (bringing together libraries with students, researchers, copyright experts and other access to knowledge advocates) at the national level, the creation of research that fills key gaps in understanding and can act as a basis for advocacy, and engagement with policy-makers and stakeholders at all levels.

In doing so, the project aims to provide both an evidence base, and concrete examples of changes in legislation and practice that can serve as a model and advocacy tool for libraries and other access to knowledge advocates elsewhere, in Europe and beyond. It is designed, similarly, to leave a legacy of a stronger library networks both as independent voices and as partners for wider efforts to promote positive legislative change.
